Dear Hiring Manager:

I really think this is a place I can excel at and would love a chance to interview with you. The tech stack you are using is very similar to some of the things we learned during my boot camp. We were learning Angular but I discovered React while working on a project and fell in love with it and it quickly rose to one of my top skills; I am also very comfortable with HTML5, JavaScript, and CSS. While we did a bit of unit testing during the boot camp, I don't have too much experience with automated testing but I have always loved diving into new things head first and just learning as I go along. I have picked up countless skills over the years; the main one being to learn new things very quickly. My top skills at the moment are; React.js/Redux, Node.js, .NET/ASP.NET MVC, and SQL/MongoDB as well as basic web design principles. I recently graduated from a coding boot camp focusing on full-stack web development, and I am extremely eager to continue learning and get my foot in the door! While I may not have a lot of experience, that just means I can be molded into the perfect developer for your needs. If I get the opportunity to work with you, I guarantee I will not put it to waste!

Thank you,

Damian Green
